CONNECTICUT COINING, INC.

For over 50 years Connecticut Coining, Inc. has been a leading manufacturer of deep-drawn metal parts used in a variety of commercial, aerospace, medical, automotive and defense applications. Based on customers' supplied drawings we design the tools and deep draw parts in a wide variety of metals from traditional to exotic, used for bellows, ducts, housings, shields, rings, cups, brackets, high voltage power and x-ray tubes, as well as a number of other applications.

In our 30,000 sq. ft. facility located in Bethel, Connecticut (USA), Connecticut Coining's highly skilled production, tooling, support and quality personnel, is employed in the service of a diverse client-base, both domestically and internationally. Founded by Gregory J. Marciano in 1963, the company moved to the newly completed 18,500 sq. ft. facility in the Francis Clark Industrial Park in Bethel, CT, in 1998. Mr. Marciano's son, Gregory Jr., purchased the company in 2002, and an additional 12,000 sq. ft. was added to the facility in 2008.

Connecticut Coining's production provisions include a press department with wide range equipment from 10 to 500 tons, a CNC lathe department, and a finishing department, as well as inspection and quality control, with high tech laser CMM measuring equipment. Our talented toolmakers serve to support production in the design of sophisticated tools and dies designed using the latest CAD software systems. Our ability to translate customer requirements into parts holding extremely tight tolerances (both U.S. standard and metric) is unsurpassed in the industry.

Connecticut Coining specializes in short-runs (of 25 to 25,000 pieces) and prototypes, using a variety of materials including Inconel® Hastelloy X®, titanium, stainless steel, aluminum, and assorted nickel-based alloys. Our products include stand-alone parts and component parts, many of which are bonded to ceramic or glass at customer sites.

With the integration of continuous improvement methodologies and an adherence to

ISO 9001 principles, Connecticut Coining, Inc. demonstrates a commitment to both meet and exceed customer requirements and expectations. We are also ITAR registered to enhance our quality portfolio for our US customers.
